Carlos joined Mayora & Mayora in 2012 and has built a solid track record in corporate, commercial, banking and finance law. Throughout his career, he has regularly advised local and international clients on highly complex legal matters.

His practice focuses on financing transactions, structuring of guarantees, banking advisory, corporate reorganizations, and mergers and acquisitions, assisting both financial institutions and companies from various industries in strategic business transactions.

His experience is characterized by a practical and business-oriented approach, which has enabled him to lead and coordinate projects related to credit transactions, financial agreements, structuring and modification of security interests, and comprehensive corporate advisory services. He works closely with multidisciplinary teams within the firm and with clients in the banking, financial and institutional sectors.

In addition, Carlos serves as a lecturer at the "Universidad Francisco Marroquín" where he teaches Civil Contracts and Commercial Contracts, and serves as a tutor in closing process courses. His academic involvement complements his professional practice with a strong theoretical foundation and continuous engagement with developments in contractual and corporate law.

Carlos holds a Master of Laws (LL.M.) in American Law with a specialization in International Business from Boston University School of Law, and has also completed postgraduate studies at Harvard Law School. He further holds a Certificate as an Expert in Competition Law awarded by Universidad Carlos III de Madrid, which strengthens his strategic analysis in corporate and financial transactions across the region.
