Representative Cases

Iván Flores Hércules has over 15 years of professional experience advising national and international companies in corporate, financial, regulatory, commercial, and dispute resolution matters. He has supported financial institutions in the structuring, acquisition, and granting of financing.

His professional practice includes advising on commercial contracts such as distribution, agency, and representation agreements, with notable involvement in operations such as the management and acquisition of licenses for major pharmaceutical companies from India and China. He has also advised companies in the energy, construction, and hospitality industries on the negotiation of strategic contracts and complex commercial relationships.

He has represented clients in significant litigation cases, including ordinary proceedings for damages claims brought against Chiquita Logistic Services Honduras and Génesis Energía. He has also participated in conflict resolution through arbitration, as well as in the prevention of potential litigation.
